

Employee Retention Credit Program Qualifications

Even if your business did not have a revenue reduction or was deemed essential....

You can still qualify for ERC!

---

Some Examples Include:

- Change in business hours
- Partial or full suspension of your operations
- Shutdowns of your supply chain or vendors
- Reduction in services offered
- Reduction in workforce or employee workloads
- A disruption in your business (division or department closures)
- Inability to visit a client's job site
- Suppliers were unable to make deliveries of critical goods or materials
- Additional spacing requirements for employees and customers due to social distancing
- Change in job roles/functions
- Tasks or work that couldn't be done from home or while transitioning to remote work conditions
- Lack of Travel
- Lack of Group Meetings

The key considerations are...

Due to the government order of partial or full suspension, was your business NOT able to continue its activities in a comparable manner and did that result in a more than nominal impact on your business operations?

If you answered yes to any the above, reach out to us and find out how we can help you maximize your refund.
